

ABSTRACT

A method, apparatus and system for detection of and reaction to rogue access points is generally presented. In this regard, a security agent is introduced to compare at least a subset of information received from a wired network device with information previously stored to determine if a rogue access point is present.